

Jack has worked in the legal sector for a number of years starting his journey in a large local authority practicing in a multitude of areas before moving to Reeves and Co to specialise in Criminal law. Jack previously ran his own successful business whilst completing his A-levels where he specialised in the training of young people with disabilities as well as severe learning difficulties.

All of this has been completed whilst obtaining his degree from the prestigious City of London Law Schools 'Solicitor Apprentice' training program where he obtained his law degree, LLB (Hons) Legal Practice.

Jack is also a qualified Police Station Representative meaning he advocates for clients at the police station and assists with their case right up until the conclusion of their case, normally at the crown court; assisting KC's and experienced barristers. Due to Jack's previous training, he specialises in assisting young people with extra needs such as Autism, ADHD, BPD and similar.

Jack regularly assists in a multitude of serious cases including murder, terrorism, rape/sexual offences, large drug importations and cases of appeal of the highest degree. In 2023 Jack has assisted in obtaining several not guilty pleas for murder and attempted murder and he now wishes to specialise in serious assaults against the person and terrorism offences.
